

Learning from History

History is one of the teachers when it comes to guidance in today's reality. Dealing with things from the past makes us more aware of the hidden ropes in the present and opens new perspectives on the problems existing in our society for centuries: discrimination, hate, indifference, radicalism. This year's edition of the German-Polish-Ukrainian educational project "Learning from History" focuses on the issue of hate speech in historical and contemporary perspectives.

While facing what seems to be a rising of unrestrained hate in today's world, we are asking on how the web is changing society's struggle protecting individual and collective rights – and how we must change our habits to counteract it: Creative workshops will be our working tool.

We all know that we should learn from the past, but is it possible?
 Join us and check it out for yourself!
